(Reuters) - At a multinational conference that attracted thousands of academics, engineers and other experts, some warned U.S. states from California to Florida to be prepared for what they call "water wars" as droughts and growing demand for water in China and elsewhere strain the U.S. supply. Howard Michael said the water conflict in California was a "new phenomenon" that would become more common as the world's population doubled by mid-century and population growth was concentrated in the developing world. Michael, a professor at Columbia University in New York, told the South Carolina Inter-State Water Dispute Conference in Columbia on Sunday that California was likely to have a "major drought" in the next decade as water flows into the Pacific, dropped by a quarter over the last decade. He described that situation as "a recipe for conflict," saying "We'll have a major drought in a major state." Mark Jacobson, director of the Stanford University Water Program, cited recent Chinese government data showing that

III Petitioner claims further that the prosecution withheld material evidence and that this was a denial of due process. The claim is without merit. IV Petitioner claims that his motion to dismiss the information for lack of speedy trial was erroneously denied, since he had been incarcerated for more than 30 days before he was tried. The claim is frivolous. Although petitioner apparently obtained

Watch the movie trailer from: News Today, Dastak, Life Ki Rani... 3 Comments Paul McNallyA short film is a motion picture filmed on a fixed set; in contrast, a feature film is a motion picture that has a budget of at least US$25,000,000. The distinction may also be related to the size and complexity of the production, since a short film is generally less elaborate and expensive to produce than a feature film. An animated short film is a film that is primarily made of motion-traced drawings, using cutout animation or photoplays. The term short film may be used for films not intended for commercial release, such as personal films. I think it important to work on something that is worthy of your attention. All the bestKarra Vishnubhai Kalidas II (25 April 1847 - 12 November 1903), popularly known as 'Dada Sahib', was a 19th-century Marathi poet, playwright and historian. He is popularly known as Dada Sahib (also spelled Dadasaheb) because of his often-used byline for most of his works: "Dada Sahibbhaan Bhaargane [written by the author of these witty notes]". He wrote plays, novels, biographies, historical plays and poetry. He was a prolific writer and many of his works have been published over time. His most prominent work is Saraswat Manuscripts, which is a compilation of Marathi literature and history. It includes the definitive text of the Vedic literature along with numerous literary and cultural works. Sir Vishnubhai Rana Dongre (27 April 1851 - 19 October 1922), popularly known as 'Dada Shrinkhala', was a 19th-century poet and story writer from Surat who wrote the play Jagadguru Sh
