Simple Rule : A car with a functioning battery will always start (or at least ease off the brake pedal) using it's key and lock. (If the key fobs are in perfect condition, I can set them to prevent a lock or key, and also tell when the car is being unlocked) The opposite is not always true. If you can remember ONE key, you might be able to steal a key, but you can't steal a whole system. Never let you car fill with gas? never not take your car at an event? If the car is gone by the time the credits rolls, you're S.O.L. If you really want your car, take your owner with you. All cars should just STOP when there are 25 seconds left, wait for the police, and if necessary, to just take a parking ticket, and be a good neighbour. If you are rich enough to show up in 50 different countries... try just taking money out in bigger amounts. With the AirRunner, you can fly more often. With the XS40
