I'm trying to do this in Python, how is it done in other languages? Here is my try: i = 10 def t(i): for i in range (10, 99, 1): print (i) i+=1 t(i) A: Use recursion. Python doesn't have loops anyway, so recursion is the only way you can produce output. def t(i): if i >= 10: print i else: t(i+1) and sustainable, so that we can protect the environment and be good stewards of it in the future. The ADL board has the potential to be a major force for good in the world. We must have the courage to tell the truth, and we must educate every individual to the truth, and inspire them to act on the truth. In addition, it is incumbent on us to engage with the President, the Congress, the Courts, and all of our levels of government to show them that there are ways in which we can be good to our planet, and good to ourselves. It will take much effort, and it will take education, but the next generation will thank us, and they will remember that we were the ones who led the charge to fight for their future.Q: What's wrong with this quickSort in c?
