The MRC was established in 1982 as a temporary body intended to last only for a year, but it remained in existence after the military was allowed to return to civilian life in 1984, and in 1989 it was endowed with the status of a permanent body. Its powers have expanded to include the appointment of a director-general, a chief of staff, and a chief of operations, who is the commander-in-chief of the Turkish Armed Forces. It also has the power to write the position statement for the minister of defense, and, in 2008, members were elected for a five-year term by the Grand National Assembly. The MRC has six subcommittees, which are responsible for vetting the appointments, promotions, and performance evaluation of military officers. In the event of a vacancy in an important position, the MRC is empowered to select the successor. The MRC has played a significant role in the Turkish military's transition to civilian leadership. After the military takeover in 1980, the MRC helped to draft the 1982 Constitution, which was proclaimed at the national convention held at the Presidential Palace on March 1, 1982. In addition to being a source of constitutional legitimacy for the military, the MRC's mission also was to promote the rapid transfer of the armed forces to civilian control, as well as to bring the institution into good working order. In 1994, the MRC was awarded the Stockholm Water Prize in recognition of its work. History It was 0cc13bf012
