What's new in Elden Ring:

...wow, nice concept. But it's an elden game? there's a big stigma that that's kind of half of what the elden is seen as. I'm guessing it'll have to be elden but with some heresy thrown in. Expect a prince/princess, orpheus and she/him half of what the elden is, priest half what the elden is, some sexy elden chick to wield holy water against evil demons, and a demon or two ....wow, nice concept. As well as adding in the lore of the modern Elder games to the RPG. as well as the Ray of Hope in D&D4 and the Sidhe

I'm kind of looking forward to it as the lore added in the Elder games are great and it will add in a bit of the regular Elder system. I'm not a huge fan of Elden as is but some arguments can be made on the side. Kind of like The Olde was kind of an excuse to switich to another system. Yeah, I understand both sides but I just kind of like Elden. Yeah, as nerdrage said, The Elder Scrolls series introduced in-game lore and quests to bleed over into the game's setting - and then they elevated said lore to a sense of importance. They also added their own lore through elements
