Leigh syndrome due to the m.12336T>C variant of the ATP6 gene. A 15-year-old male patient with Leigh syndrome presented in this study. The patient was previously healthy, and he lost his ability to walk at 4 years of age. He lost muscle tone, and he became mute and was confined to a wheelchair. The patient had no relevant family history. The patient was born to nonconsanguineous, healthy parents. On the initial physical examination, he had poor muscle tone with slow reflexes in all limbs, bilateral ptosis, dilated pupils and ophthalmoplegia. In addition, there were no other abnormalities on the other systems. A brain MRI showed symmetrical, generalized T2 hyperintensity of the cerebral white matter and brainstem. Neurological examination revealed that he had a cerebellar syndrome. He had mutations on both the mitochondrial DNA and the m.12336T>C variant of the ATP6 gene. His symptoms persisted despite the pyridoxine therapy.

Q: Is it possible to conditionally generate a string representation of an object? Is it possible to conditionally generate a string representation of an object? For example, if object contains member a, b and c, I would like to create string like: a, b and c

Other details: I know there are a number of options such as FastSerializer and JSON.NET but I'd like to find out if there is some simpler way. I was not able to find much information online. A: There's a custom ToStringConverter registered through an [OnSerializing] hook that will write out any properties that are being serialized
